INTRODUCTION

Nexen's Linear Actuators provide the thrust that is required to move an unwind stand, a wind up roll stand or to convert an existing hydraulically actuated web guiding mechanism to electrical actuation.

Nexen's Linear Actuators are available in several models with different strokes.

To ensure optimum response and accuracy, roll stands should be mounted on linear ball bearings. Sliding ways and wheel track systems have higher coefficients of friction which requires greater break away thrust. Greater break away thrust prevents accurate, minute corrections.

INSTALLATION

1. Attach the Mounting Base bracket to a fixed member of the guiding mechanism.
2. Connect the Clevis End to the moveable member of the guiding mechanism.

	CAUTION Do NOT use the Linear Actuator for Radial (side) loads. The Linear Actuator is designed for axial (thrust) loads ONLY.

ELECTRICAL CONNECTIONS

NOTE: Refer to Figure 2

1. Connect the motor leads of the Linear Actuator to the motor output terminals of the Web Guide Controller, as follows:

NOTE: If the Linear Actuator moves in the wrong direction, then reverse the wire lead connections.

LIMIT SWITCH ADJUSTMENT

These actuators have nonadjustable internal limit switches that are factory pre-set for the maximum stroke length. For applications that require less than the maximum stroke, install an external limit switch and connect it to the web guide controller.

	 CAUTION
	If there is a physical obstruction or stop that prohibits the use of the maximum stroke length, then an external limit switch MUST be installed to interrupt the Linear Actuator's movement before contact is made with the physical obstruction or stop.
	Failure to use an external limit switch will damage both the Linear Actuator and the web guiding mechanism. If there is no physical obstruction to travel, then the nonadjustable, internal limit switches may be used in their default position for maximum stroke length.

MAINTENANCE

NOTE: Refer to Figure 3

Apply a few drops of light machine oil to the actuating rod. The frequency in which the Linear Actuator will require lubrication depends upon the working environment.
